DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US patent 6102449, Welsh in view of US patent 5848813, Albrecht.

In regards to claims 1-10, Welsh discloses a coupling element, comprising:
a male sealing element having a first end, second end, and a longitudinal axis extending between said first end and said second end, wherein said male sealing element has a generally cylindrical shape, wherein said male sealing element defines a fluid passageway therethrough for the transmission of fluid, wherein said male sealing element is slideably coupled to a ferrule (160), wherein said first end defines a conical sealing surface, wherein a female sealing element (132) defines a complementary conical geometry; and a biasing element (154) disposed between a retaining ring (170) and said ferrule for biasing said first end into direct abutting contact with said female sealing element with a biasing force sufficient to form a fluid-tight seal between said first end and said female sealing element.

Welsh does not disclose the conical sealing surface having a mismatched angle to the female sealing element. Albrecht teaches a conical sealing surface (32) having a mismatched angle to the female sealing element (22) "to ensure that said seal surface of the male portion seats on an inner diameter of the seal surface of the female portion so that fluid sealing takes place at a minimum diameter of said mating seal surfaces" (col. 2, lines 20-24). Since both Welsh and Albrecht are concerned with tapered sealing surfaces, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to fabricate the conical sealing surface with a mismatched angle to the female sealing element to ensure that said seal surface of the male portion seats on an inner diameter of the seal surface of the female portion so that fluid sealing takes place at a minimum diameter of said mating seal surfaces, as taught by Albrecht.
